Can the U.N. Survive?

As the United Nations nears its sixteenth birthday anniversary this month, it faces one of the most serious crises of its existence. The immediate crisis was raised by Premier Khrushchev's bombastic appearance at the General Assembly meetings, his insulting speeches, table thumping and demands for Soviet control. But underneath, the real crisis comes about because of the continued addition of small, newly independent nations of Asia and Africa and their indecision about their role and that of the U.N.

As far as actual votes are concerned, it would appear that Khrushchev has been beaten in New York at almost every turn. His suggestion for a 3-man committee to replace the post of Secretary General, his demands that Dag Hammarskjold resign, his efforts to seat Red China and to keep the matters of Hungary and Tibet off the agenda were all defeated. Some of the so-called neutral delegates reportedly were appalled at Khrushchev's actions, language and intemperance of demands. Nehru spoke sharply about him and new African nations, relying heavily upon the U.N., indicated they thought the attack on Hammarskjold was an attack upon the General Assembly itself.

But there are signs that compromise, so important in so large and varied a body. may serve the Russians well. The vote against the admission of Red China was smaller than ever before. Some new nations apparently feel that if the United States wins in its efforts to discuss Hungary, then the Soviet Union ought to have a victory, too, to keep things even. The resolution proposed by five "neutral" delegates for a meeting between Khrushchev and President Eisenhower actually received a majority of votes but two-thirds were needed for passage. There seems to be a growing number of abstentions indicating indecision or a hesitation to be put on the record. Such nations as Austria. Panama, Greece and Mexico abstained in the summit conference vote. Confusion was apparent in some African abstentions in the vote on Red China and the Hun-

We are inclined to feel that power politics is exclusively the property of the colonial nations and the Soviet Union. The happenings among some of the new nations should dispell that fallacy. Nasser keeps driving ahead because he wants to control the Middle East. Nkrumah and Toure of Ghana and Guinea, respectively, may support Khrushchev and Lumumba because they are Marxists or it may simply be because they think they can gain assistance toward leadership of the entire continent of Africa from these sources. Sukarno must compete with VietNam's Diem for prominence and prosperity in his own land and area. And all these leaders may forget, in the emphasis upon newly born nationalism at home, that basic principles of right and liberty can be bartered away in the General Assembly. Neither majority rule nor a watered down compromise makes an action right.

At the present, Dag Hammarskjold has received a fine vote of confidence from the General Assembly. But Trygve Lie was forced out of the same office because of conflicts with the Soviet Union. There is a growing interest among the Asian and African members for anything except a white man as a replacement for Mr. Hammarskjold when the time eventually comes that he must step down. This in itself is not alarming. But who would be acceptable. to the Soviet Union which virtually has asked for a veto power over all U.N. actions by its 3-man board proposal? It must be suspected that the by-passing of the Security Council in the "organizing for peace" maneuvers in the General Assembly instigated Khrushchev's attempts to get his distorted messages across to the world through the medium of the General As-

Some observers have indicated that the U.N. in the future will not be able to deal with political issues because of the indecision and the hamstringing. The role will be more along the line of assistance to the underdeveloped nations of the world. This is obviously an invitation for individual nations to move once again into the political arena of the new nations and this means Russia in particular since the Western nations, as former colonial powers, are held in deep distrust.

In the meantime the United States continues to pay most of the cost. Russia and other nations are behind some $20 million for the maintenance of the United Nations Emergency Force in the Gaza strip. The U. S. has volunteered to put up $100 million for proposed plans to stabilize Congo politics and economics but another $100 million is needed just for the first year of such a U.N. operation. Can we afford to pay indefinitely toward a regime which may slide into the neutralist corner without much effort?

When the thunder and aerial acts in New York come to a close it may be easier to evaluate the results of these nearly hysterical weeks. The big danger now lies in a growing acceptance of a neutralist point of view which opens the door of innumerable nations to communism and disaster. Whether the United Nations can weather the attack and remain potentially an organization for freedom and humanity is very much up in the air.

Sen. Proxmire's Campaign Argument

Sen. Proxmire used a rather odd argument at Eikhorn recently when he undertook to say a few words in behalf of the Kennedy-Johnson ticket.

He said a vote for Vice President Richard M. Nixon is the same as a vote for Texas oil interests and the 27¹2 per cent depletion allowance. Sen. Proxmire declared that Nixon had "directly promised Texans that he favored the 27¹2 per cent depletion advantage for oil."

Whether the oil depletion allowance is a good thing or a bad thing is beside the point here. What is interesting is that Sen. Proxmire is asking Wisconsin voters to cast their ballot for Texas Sen. Johnson for vice president of the United States knowing full well that Sen. Johnson is and has been over the years the spokesman for the Texas oil interests in the United States Senate and a staunch supporter of the 2712 per cent depletion allowance. It would seem that the senator from Wisconsin could have chosen a better issue for his argument on the stump.

The oil depletion allowance is only one of a number of such allowances granted to take into account the exhaustion of a natural resource as it may be extracted from a mine or an oil well and sold. Congress established the 2712 per cent allowance to oil and gas producers in the Internal Revenue act of 1926. It later granted allowances for other minerals and metals. some of which are still in effect. They include 23 per cent for uranium, sulphur and other strategic and critical materials mined from deposits within the United States (15 per cent if produced outside the United States: 10 per cent for coal. asbestos and sodium chloride and 5 per

The depletion allowance has enjoyed strong support in the Senate throughout its history. In 1950 and again in 1951 the Truman administration asked Congress to cut oil and gas depletion allowances and to make reductions in other minerals. Congress ignored the request. Instead it increased some and added new ones.

In 1954, Sens. John J. Williams (R.-Delaware). George D. Aiken (R.-Vermont) and Herbert H. Lehman (D-New York) offered an amendment to cut the oil and gas allowances from 2712 per cent to 15 per cent. It was rejected by a voice vote. Sen. Paul Douglas of Illinois offered a substitute which would have permitted oil depletion allowances on gross annual oil and gas incomes which did not exceed $1.000,000. This was rejected by a standing vote. Douglas and Williams offered similar amendments in 1957 and were rejected by voice votes. In 1957, Sen. Williams sought to cut the depletion allowance on oil and gas producers from 27'z to 15 per cent and was defeated, 26 to 63. Sen. Proxmire's proposal to limit a full 27¹2 per cent to producers with incomes of $1.000.000 or less was rejected 31 to 58. That was the highest vote cast in opposition to the depletion allowance in the history of the bill.

Except for Mr. Nixon's statement, we don't know what Mr. Nixon promised the Texans but we do know that the Democrats have promised them a vice president to look after their interests including the oil depletion allowance, which seems to need little additional support in the Senate.

son had moved from their home and that he had not lived with his wife since 1955.

Whether this caused Mr. Hahn great distress and humiliation, as he says, we are willing to leave to the courts. Likewise we will leave to them the question of his damages, but any occasional TV viewer should be permitted to ask why Mrs. Hahn was chosen to appear on this program. Usually the subjects are persons who have made a great success by overcoming unusual odds.

The spokesman for Mr. Edwards in Hollywood says that Mrs. Hahn was selected because the program, was aimed at Mother's Day, and Mrs. Hahn was a mother who had "sacrificed for her children."

It's one answer to the cry for greater academic achievement. (Ability grouping is used in many courses in Appleton junior: and senior high schools. In the elementary department, however, an experiment in the opposite direction is taking place — a class at Huntley school contains a variety of pupils ranging from slow

6-year-olds to bright 8-year-olds.) Philosophers support the common sense notion that with "mental segregation" pupils can learn: more. Won't bright youngsters take off with jet speed when no longer held back by the piodders? Won't slower students pick up when instruction is geared to their pace and need?

But many schoolmen don't think ability grouping either fair; or democratic. They don't like what it does to a child. How would you like to be officially labeled a dullard? Children know the real difference between the

An elaborate decorative main close conjunction with an insorry guile - actually the key door room, so that it seems like to this whole end of the house you're almost out even when - provides the necessary privacy both to the porch and the living A good example of what modroom A barbecue gives the area ern outdoor living should be is a point of interest of its own to contained in B-33 in the House emphasize what it actually is - a of the Week series, designed by full fledged room, which enjoys Architect Rudolph A Matern. An the special freshness and exhiliration of the outdoors.

Despite the luxury of this porch and the fact the house has four bedrooms and 112 baths. B-33 is not big Excluding the terraces the living area is only 1 193 square teet Over-all dimensions are 57 in width by 27'1" in depth

The simplicity of the room arrangement permits every square foot of space to be put to maximum ase Both the bring room and the open kitchen-dining area larger than you might expect A center hall in the bedroom area creates excellent traffic cuculation

Architect Matern provided gen erous storage space throughout the home Closets are large in all bedrooms, and there's an abundant supply of knichen cabinets dotted lines in floor plan indicate wall cabinets. The storage wall in the garage is planned so that one closet opens to the porch. another to the backyard - in addition to those serving the garage itself. The guest closet at the end of the basement starway space helps to divide the living

A dramatic accent in exterior decor is created by the unusual shape of the chimney. The angled extension of the chimney to the front forms one 'wall' of the porch sheltering the front entry Combined with the brick planter and graceful wooden uprights at the other end it creates a warm and attractive welcome for the room and dining room.

Bill Mazeroski Says He Hit High, Fast Ball

Credits Loss of Weight for His Series Showing

PITTSBURGH (AP) -One day last fall General Manager Joe L. Brown of the Pittsburgh Pirates called Billy Mazeroski into his office and chided the young second sacker.

"You're overweight Trim down." Brown said without cracking a smile. Mazeroski promised he would. During the winter the 24-year-old infielder cut 10 pounds

Mazeroski? the hero of the climactic seventh game of the World Series, credits the loss of weight and a changed batting philosophy for his contribution to the series

"I batted all right in 1957 and 1958 but I had a bad year last year. I hit only .241 and batted 🌌 in only 59 runs. Maybe these two ? series home runs will sort of balance things out."

Makes Up Mind Mazeroski will long remember his prodigious 405-foot clout over the left field wall that gave the Pirates a 10-9 triumph "I made up my mind I was going for the long ball." he recalled. "Terry's first pitch was a slider, the second was high and fast - just what I wanted. "I caught it on the fat of my

bat. I knew it was a good hit The jubilant Pirates swarmed ever the second sacker both on the field and in the dressing room where they toasted themselves

Use a piece of cardboard such as the back of a writing tablet. With tracing paper trace upon it the outline of the picture you want to reproduce. Brightly colored birds or animals, or Mexican, or Indian figures and scenes are the best to use because brilliant colors will be suitable.

Paint the picture—the figures and the background-with your water colors. When the paint has dried, hold the colored side beneath the cold water faucet until it is soaked throughly. Add more paint to the parts that must be colored deeply, but let the background remain in the pastel shades resulting from washing the picture.

2 Killed, 5 Hurt In Kansas Blast LEAVENWORTH, Kan. (AP) -

Two inmates were killed and five other persons, including a supervisor employe, were injured today in an explosion which destroyed a slaughter house building outside the walls of the U.S. penitentiary. Elmer L. Bauder, 46, the supervisor employe, was found in the wreckase about two hours after the blast. Four other inmates were injured. Cause of the blast was not determined immediately. Warden J. C Taylor said the banding contained a gas-fired botter and it was possible it exploded.

Names of the two inmates who were dead on arrival at the prison hospital were withheld pending notification of relatives.

Panel Truck with double doors on both sides: *52655 delivered locally

Can your truck pass this test?

The real test of a truck is not how much it can carry, but how little-and still show a profit.

The curious thing about Volkswagen Trucks is that they not only make large loads practical, they make small loads profitable. A VW does its job at half the cost of standard half-tons. Half the gas, half the oil, half the tire wear. Even the smallest delivery makes sense. Aren't most of your deliveries under full capacity? If they are, you ought to look into the VW operating story.

doors and rear door. And how easily you park -a VW is 3 feet shorter than standard trucks.) If you wouldn't mind paying less for more payload, call us or come in. We'll be happy to give you a demonstration.

But if they're not, there's something else about a VW that's important. It will deliver 830 pounds more than your present half-ton.

Leaflets Tell Farmers to Use Care With Sprays

WASHINGTON (AP) The Agriculture Department is distributing leaflets in dairy areas urging, milk producers to employ great care in the use of chemicals in milk production.

"Consumer confidence in our milk supply is well grounded," the department says. "We have the knowledge to maintain this confidence. Mr. Dairyman: It is up to you to maintain the purity of our milk supply by using pesticides and antibiotics safely."

Emphasizing that chemicals have an essential place in modern milk production, the department urges dairymen to follow the label on the containers of any pesticide they buy. It also urges them to check with their county agricultural agent or veterinarian when uncertain about use of chemicals.

135 Students to Attend Educational Soils School

WAUPACA - The eighth annual Waupaca County Land Judging Contest for county high school agriculture students will be Oct 19 at the Morris Van Adestine farm, three miles southeast of Manawa.

The event, which is attended by about 135 students, is an educational as well as contest second. The pupils primarily are taught about soils and how they should be treated, Herbert Tauchen, contest chairman, said.

Four types of soils samples are displayed, he explained, and the students are shown methods of determining how to treat the land. "For example, rotation, strip cropping, terracing, water ways or drainage may be needed," Tauchen said.

Then the students judge four LEEMAN — Mrs. Harold unclassified pits, he said, which Strauch and sons of Anchorage Picked for Chilton Plans were made for an an-

Proposed Changes

The purpose of the proposed changes, according to Wisconsin Department of Agriculture officials, is to provide for a more strict supervision of quality by inspectors of the department and dairy plant fieldmen.

New provisions prescribe procedures (1) to be followed by dairy inspectors at both farm and dairy plants in rejecting unsanitary milk and (2) the withholding of the farm supply until such time as concrete measures have been taken to correct conditions that affect the quality of the milk

Existing regulations governing sediment, methylene blue and, other bacteriological tests for quality would also be revised.

The revisions also provide that
